The rules of soccer are the same as for football, but with one important caveat: The matches last 90 minutes, not 120 minutes. In soccer, the referee can stop play for injuries, substitutions, and other reasons. The referee can also stop play for dangerous play, such as a player using his hands or feet to touch the ball. The referee can also stop play for misconduct, such as a player using foul language or committing a foul. The referee can also stop play for time, such as when the game is over or when the referee has a foul to call. The referee can also stop play for other reasons, such as a player being injured or a player being substituted.
