The announcement comes after Microsoft on Friday def eated a last-ditch effort by the US Federal Trade Commission to scuttle the 8068; company#39;sR$68.7 billion purchase of Activision Blizzard. The Ninth Ci rcuit Court of Appeals declined to grant the regulator an emergency stay ㈆ 8; of a ruling that allows the deal to proceed in the US. The United Kingdom#3 9;s Markets and Competition Authority (CMA) 👄 is the last remaining reg ulator of note opposed to the purchase, but the watchdog and Microsoft recently agreed to put 👄 their legal battle over the deal on hold and negotiate a compromise. We are pleased to announce that Microsoft and @PlayStation 👄 h ave signed a binding agreement to keep Call of Duty on PlayStation following the acquisition of Activision Blizzard. We look 👄 forward to a future wher e players globally have more choice to play their favorite games. Phil Spencer "From Day One of this acquisition, we ve been committed to address ing the concerns of regulators, platform and game developers, 👄 and con sumers," Microsoft President and Vice Chair Brad Smith tweeted in response to Spencer#39;s post. "Even after we cross the 👄 finish line for this deal s approval, we will remain focused on ensuring that Call of Duty remai ns available on more 👄 platforms and for more consumers than ever befor e." Spencer did not disclose the terms of Microsoft#39;s deal with Sony, t hough Stephen 👄 Totilo of Axios later confirmed that it is 10 years in duration. Microsoft first offered Sony a 10-year deal to 👄 keep Call of Duty on current and future PlayStation consoles at the end of last year, though the Japanese electronics 👄 giant turned down the olive branch at the t ime. In an effort to secure approval from regulators, including the FTC 👄 👄 and CMA, Microsoft went on to sign an agreement with Nintendo to bring the se ries to the company#39;s future consoles. 👄 It also came to terms with cloud gaming providers like NVIDIA.
